could pay towards a Bottlenose Dolphin Officer to give an educational talk to school children, raising awareness of the marine environment and provide information about what people can do themselves to help conserve our seas.

could pay towards supporting our advocacy work to help secure a network of marine protected areas around the UK which will help to protect our most important marine species such as the pink sea fan and harbour porpoise.

could pay towards providing vital campaign materials to highlight the issues facing our oceans and encourage the Government to effectively manage our marine environment

£250

could pay towards enabling survey work on Hebridean Whale and Dolphins to be carried out and support their protection.

£50

could pay towards providing the much needed opportunity to bring together key marine users to discuss and agree on actions on how to better manage the marine environment.

£500

could pay towards supporting a fisheries improvement project to introduce more sustainable fishing gear, and help reduce accidental capture of other marine species

Please make cheques and postal orders payable to WWF-UK
